ABOUT THE COURSE

The International Youth Health Organization (YHO) presents the 2021 Youth Health Advocacy Summer School. It is a 3-day intensive event, which brings together young people, members of youth organizations, youth workers, workers that work with youth and experts for discussions, interactive training activities and workshops on the subject of Advocacy, Youth Health and Youth Engagement.

This event will cover »How to« design effective public health-related policy documents, advocate comprehensive public policies, create successful public health campaigns and monitor the implementation of already accepted regulations. If you are interested in public health and advocacy and want to know and do more about youth health issues in your city, country, or even Europe, then this event is right for you.

The main YHO Advocacy summer school objectives are to:

- Raise interest among young people and youth organizations about public health;
- Promote evidence-informed interventions and exchange good advocacy practices on youth health;
- Empower the participants with the necessary skills and capacities in order to effectively work on the field of public health and advocacy;

- Empower the participants with the necessary tools to engage in advocacy for more comprehensive health policies at regional, national, and international levels;
- Provide necessary tools and training for participants to be able to conduct projects to improve youth health;
- Give participants the opportunity for networking with stakeholders, public health professionals, and organizations, working on the same topics.

ABOUT YHO

YHO works towards the health and wellbeing of young people, through the promotion of healthy lifestyles and prevention of non-communicable diseases, including mental health and environmental health. It develops and supports evidence-based and effective policies to assure health-promoting environments for young people. Our main aim is to support, connect and educate young people to become a voice for change in the field of public health.
